1. Identify and explain the figures of speech or tropes from any one of the passages : 10×1=10

(a) It was in Burma, a sodding morning of the mire. A sickly light, like yellow tinfoil, was slanting over the highwalls into the jail yard. We were waiting outside the condemned cells, a row of sheds fronted with double bars, like small animal cages. Each cell measured about ten feet by ten and was quite bare within except for plank bed and a pot of drinking water. In some of them brown silent men were squatting at the inner bars, with their blankets draped round them. These were the condemned men, due to be hanged within the next week or two.

One prisoner had been brought out of his cell. He was a Hindu, a puny wisp of a man, with a shaven head and vague liquid eyes. He had a thick, sprouting moustache, absurdly too big for his body, rather like the moustache of a comic man on the films. Six tall Indian warders were guarding him and getting him ready for the gallows.

- (b) Ships at a distance have every man's wish on board. From some they come in with the tide. For others they sail forever on the horizon, never out of sight, never landing until the watcher turns his eyes away in resignation, his dreams mocked to death by Time. That is the life of men. Now, women forget all those things they don't want to remember, and remember everything they don't want to forget. The dream is the truth. The they act and do things accordingly.

(a) Behold her, single in the field
Yon solitary Highland lass!
Reaping and singing by herself,
Stop here or gently pass!
Alone she cuts and binds the grain,
And sings a melancholy strain,
O listen! for the vale profound
Is overflowing with the sound.

(b) Move him into the sun—
Gently its touch awoke him once,
At home, whispering of fields half-sown,
Always it woke him, even in France,
Until this morning and this snow,
If anything might rouse him now,
The kind old sun will know.

[New Syllabus]

Full Marks : 80

Time : Three Hours Thirty Minutes

The figures in the margin indicate full marks.

1. Attempt a close reading of the following passage. 20×1=20

In civilised life there is a rule against violence, against taking the law into our own hands; it is a rule which most of us observe – So many, indeed that a great number of people go through life accepting orderliness and non-violence as a part of the scheme of nature, but when an individual comes into their midst who refuses to observe the current rules and follows the same rule that might is right, the law abiding members of Society do not know what to do and look on in a helpless, bewildered confusion.

The last two wars did something to alter man's attitude towards the rules of life but much less than what might have been expected. Men went into the fighting line not because 'Man is a fighting animal', but because they were law-abiding citizens, obediently doing what the state told them to do. It was the duty of the soldier to commit violence upon his country's enemies ; but he did these things under orders and the doing of them hardly impaired his normal law-abidingness. Considering the fact that, for many years, half the grown up men in Europe were engaged in trying to murder one another, one can only be astonished that the post-war increase in crimes of violence has not been vastly greater. That it has not is a proof of how deeply the habit of playing according to rules has become ingrained in us.
